EXERCISE 1: A Baby Takes Money

For this exercise, you must project yourself into the future. Most students in this course will not be parents, but in order to complete this exercise, we want you to pretend that you are about to become a parent for the first time.

We have listed below all of the supplies you will need for this first baby. It will be your job to find out how much these supplies will cost.

We are aware that many of these supplies are often given to parents as gifts or are loaned by friends and relatives, but this can never be counted upon with certainty. Therefore, for the purpose of this exercise, pretend that you must purchase all of these items.

Instructions:

Use catalogues and department store advertisements to price each of the following items. At the end of page 3, calculate the total cost of the items and tell whether this was approximately the cost you expected, more money or less money than you expected.

EXERCISE 2: Asking for Personal Opinions – A Mini-Survey

Note: The object of this exercise is for you to learn firsthand about parents' feelings.

The object of this exercise is not to be seen as prying into people's personal lives. Therefore, choose a parent who feels very comfortable revealing his or her feelings about the parenting experience to help you with this exercise.

If, in your questioning, you uncover values different from your own, remember to respect everyone's right to his or her own opinion.

Instructions:

Ask any parent you know one of these questions (or more, if you wish).

On the next page, explain what answers and opinions you receive in reply to the question(s).

You may wish to ask several parents the same question to obtain several points of view.

Questions

1. Do (did) you find your children much of a responsibility? Explain.
2. What is your most pleasant memory of parenting?
3. What is (was) your most difficult job as a parent?
4. What do you believe is the best way to guide children to socially acceptable behaviour, to discipline them?
5. Did you learn anything about yourself through parenting?
6. (For parents whose children have left home) Did you have a hard time adjusting when your children left home?
7. (For parents who both work or worked while their children were young) How do (did) you manage the double responsibility of raising a family and working?
8. Ask a parent to read Gibran's excerpt on children-parent relationships from The Prophet (page 9, Lesson 1). Ask the parent whether he or she believes Gibran's thoughts are valid.
9. Ask a parent how he or she feels about the statement: "Motherhood is raising a child, not merely carrying and delivering it."

Complete the readings and Self-Study exercises of Module C, Lesson 2 before beginning this part of the Assignment Booklet.

EXERCISE 4: Babyproofing Your Home

Most of you will not now be living with an infant. Therefore, we want you to pretend that an infant will be coming to stay at your home for a number of months. Pretend that this infant is about seven or eight months old and therefore is easily able to crawl from one location to another.

For the safety of the child, you must babyproof your home.

Look around your home. Decide what changes will have to be made to babyproof it. Actually get down on your hands and knees and survey your home, room by room, looking for dangers that may not be apparent to you from your adult point-of-view.

On this page and the next, describe in detail and very specifically the steps you would have to take to completely babyproof your home. If you are now living with an infant, describe the steps you have taken to babyproof your home.

EXERCISE 5: Self-analysis

1. Explain clearly which other persons besides your parents have had a role in "parenting" you.

2. Children learn behaviour by modelling. Explain what this means and give examples from your own life, if you can.

Complete the readings and Self-Study exercises of Module C, Lesson 3 before beginning this part of the Assignment Booklet.

EXERCISE 6: Definitions

1. Explain the meaning of the term “egocentricity” and discuss what problems a child’s being egocentric can cause.

2. Explain the meaning of the term “overprotection.” Why can overprotection be harmful to a child’s emotional development?

This image shows a single sheet of white paper with horizontal ruling lines. The lines are evenly spaced and run across the width of the page. There are no margins, text, or other markings on the paper.

This image shows a single sheet of white paper with horizontal blue or grey ruling lines. The lines are evenly spaced and run across the width of the page. There are no margins, text, or other markings on the paper.

- Explain how this mechanism works to influence people's lives. If you can, give a real-life example of a self-fulfilling prophecy which may have influenced your life or the life of someone you know. Again, do not name your example if this is more comfortable for you.

This image shows a single sheet of white paper with horizontal blue or grey ruling lines. The lines are evenly spaced and run across the width of the page. There are approximately 20 lines visible. The paper appears to be a standard notebook page or a sheet of stationery. There is no handwriting or other markings on the page.

Complete the readings and Self-Study exercises of Module C, Lesson 4 before beginning this part of the Assignment Booklet.

EXERCISE 9: Negative Effects of Television Watching

1. Explain at least three effects that watching television violence can have on children and adults.

2. Explain three main ways in which television programming may interfere with the health raising of preschool children.

EXERCISE 10: Television Analysis

This exercise will require you to watch several hours of television. If you are one of the 5% of Canadian families who do not own a television set, then perhaps you could arrange to watch a friend's set.

- A. Television advertising is a multi-million dollar business. Hundreds of thousands of dollars are spent to try to capture the television watcher's interest and to persuade this viewer to purchase a sponsor's products.

Advertisements most often attempt to appeal to a viewer emotionally. Some ads appeal to the viewer's desire for friends; others appeal to the viewer's desire to be sexually attractive. Some advertisements appeal to viewers' feelings of guilt or fear. Some appeal to the viewers' sense of humour.

Your first assignment in this exercise involves an analysis of television commercials. This analysis may be difficult at first because you may not be used to watching commercials critically. However, once you begin to analyze how the advertisements are making an appeal, you may find this quite interesting.

Watch television long enough (probably in several sessions) to have found one advertisement which appeals to viewers in each of the following ways. Explain exactly how the advertisement makes its emotional appeal.

Find an advertisement which appeals to:

1. the viewer's desire to be popular

2. the viewer's sense of guilt or shame

3. the viewer's sense of humour

4. the viewer's sexuality

- B. Your second assignment in this exercise is to watch a television program of one-half to one hour in length and answer the following questions about the program.

Name of the Program: _____

1. Who are the sponsors (advertisers during the program) of the program? Can you think of any reason(s) that these particular sponsors would choose to sponsor this particular program during which to advertise their product?

2. Was there any violence in this program?

3. What values would this program teach to children who watched it? Both what you consider negative and positive values should be listed here.

4. How many men and how many women appeared as members of the cast of the program? Were the roles of the males and females quite stereotyped or not? Explain carefully. (See page 19 in the Assignment Booklet for a list of traditionally stereotyped characteristics of men and women.)
